

Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 09 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Rather cloudy then turning unsettled later this evening.

Today:

Patchy light rain may affect the north and west during the morning, with some brighter spells in the south. Turning cloudier for all by the afternoon but remaining dry. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:

Remaining cloudy early evening before a band of rain moves eastwards across the region later and overnight. Rain will be heavy at times with associated strong winds. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Wednesday:

Wet and windy conditions will continue into Wednesday with further outbreaks of heavy rain and strong winds. Winds will strengthen with the risk of inland gales overnight. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:

It will be a mixture of sunshine and frequent blustery showers during this period. Winds remain strong, with perhaps inland gales developing at times but gradually easing on Saturday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.